Dear Sir:

Mr. Nathan, American Consul at Palermo, has brought to our Society his interesting collection of Greek coins.

According to your telephone request, we have very carefully gone over the collection, piece by piece. We figure that the collection as it stands is worth about One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) upon the market today, as it contains many very fine and desirable pieces. In comparing them with coins in the Society's Collection, we find that we lack nearly every variety contained in Mr. Nathan's lot.

Mr. Nathan has left the pieces in our building for safe keeping, and we are holding them subject to your instructions.

Sincerely appreciating the interest you have evidenced in our Museum. I am,

Very truly yours,

President

My dear Mr Newell:

I should be very glad to contribute $500 towards such a purchase if you know of any other member from whom you can obtain the other half. Please let me know if you think this feasible.

Cordially yours,

Stirling

On my return to the city
from a short absence, I find your letter of Nov
4th awaiting me.

We appreciate very
greatly your generous offer to contribute $500
towards the purchase of Mr. Nathan's collection.

It is a collection we are ~~very~~ ^{most} desirous of securing.

I will immediately make an attempt to sound out
one or two of our friends
with a view to raising the remaining $500. Under ordinary circumstances ~~the~~
I would probably ~~not~~ be successful in a short time.
It so happens, however, that

at this particular moment
we are in the midst of an intensive effort to ^{secure} a fund of $3000
^{with which} to purchase a very important collection of Indian Peace medals. We have already canvassed most of our membership list
and I am a little diffident
at approaching them so

soon for yet further assistance.
However, I will discuss ~~the~~ ~~your~~ ~~your~~ the matter
with one or two who might be willing to join you in your generous offer.

As soon as I can I will communicate with you further.

In the meanwhile,
thanking you on ~~the~~ behalf of the Society for your interest in the advance
of our collections,

I remain

Very truly yours,

Mr. A. P. Emanuel,

Secretary to Mr. Felix M. Warburg,

52 William St., New York.

Dear Sir:-

Responding to your letter of the 28th, the coin which I am returning is a one-centesimo piece of 1826 struck for Savoy. The inscription, filled out and translated would run "Charles Felix, by the grace of God, King of Sardinia, Cyprus and Jerusalem." This inscription, and similar ones, reflect the history of the House of Savoy. If this does not fully give you the information you desire, please let me hear further from you.

Very truly yours,

Secretary.

That is all the information I desired.
